SPEAKERS

Prof. Laura Scomparin is the Deputy Rector for Social Sciences Research and Head of the Journalism Master's Degree (University of Turin). She was Chair of the Law Department (2013-2018) and, previously, Deputy Dean at the Faculty of Political Science (2011-2013), both at the University of Turin. She is Chair of the Anti-Corruption Research Group of the Law Schools Global League, Editor of the Journal "La legislazione penale" (ranked 'A' in the list of scientific journals held by the Italian Ministry for University and Research), and referee for several editorial boards. Her research interests include: Criminal law; Criminal Law of Public Administration; International Criminal Justice; and Prison Law. Principal Investigator of many projects funded by the EU focusing on, among others, International corruption in public procurements, Whistleblowing and Open data in preventing and combating corruption.

Prof. Silvia Allegrezza is Associate Professor of Criminal law and Criminal Procedure at the University of Luxembourg. Her research focuses on European criminal law and criminal procedure, comparative evidence law, genetics forensics, financial crime, and anti-money laundering integrated strategies. She has led several research projects and written widely on the above. She is a member of the EU Commission experts' group on criminal justice, served as Rapporteur for the EU Parliament on anti-money laundering and cooperates with the European Central Bank on administrative sanctions.

SPEAKERS

Dr. Lorenzo Bernardini is Postdoctoral Researcher in Criminal Law and Criminal Procedure at the University of Luxembourg. He is participating in two DG JUST Action Grants funded by the European Commission – the first focused on the mutual recognition of freezing and confiscation orders, and the second on the digitalization of defense rights –. His research focuses on European criminal law and criminal procedure, fair trial rights, mutual recognition of freezing and confiscation orders, criminalization of the breach of EU restrictive measures and immigration detention.

Dr. Ernestina Sacchetto is Research Fellow of Criminal Procedural Law at the University of Turin. She got a Ph.D. in Criminal Procedural Law with a dissertation on the use of automated biometrics in criminal proceedings. Visiting Ph.D. at Hebrew University of Jerusalem (AY 2018-19) and Visiting Scientist at Netherlands Forensic Institute (AY 2021-2022). Her major research fields include European Criminal Procedure, Comparative Criminal Procedure, the expert evidence in criminal proceedings, AI and criminal investigation.

Dr. Oscar Calavita is research fellow and adjunct professor of Criminal Procedure Law at the University of Turin.
